

---

Salesforce paid $3.6B for an agent that handles
76% of support

swipe →

1

The deal

Salesforce is acquiring Fin, formerly Intercom, for $3.6 billion — the largest agentic customer service acquisition announced to date.

2

The number that earned it

Fin's AI agent resolves 76% of support volume end-to-end across chat, email, WhatsApp, SMS, phone, and Slack. 30,000+ companies use it.

3

Salesforce's own momentum

Agentforce hit $1.2 billion ARR in Q1 FY27, up 205% year-over-year. They aren't bolt-on acquiring — they're doubling down on a bet already working.

4

How Fin got here

Intercom was a chat widget. They rebuilt around an agent that owns outcomes, not conversations. That reframe is what a $3.6B exit looks like.

5

What this signals

Support crossed 76% automation and a $3.6B buyer appeared. Hiring screens, sales calls, onboarding are the same kind of pipeline. The pattern is forming.

---

Who owns the next workflow?

The model underneath gets swapped. The workflow owner gets acquired.

Follow Ahmed Raza for builder takes on AI